The Sign Of a Good Cook

Careful selection of the materials used in cookery is the beginning of good cooking.

Proper selection indicates a desire for and a knowledge of the essentials of success.

You cannot buy in a slipshod fashion and mix things up in a haphazard way and be a good cook, or a good anything else.

Such a policy produces slatterns instead of experts, and develops adversity instead of prosperity.

Whenever and wherever you find the housewife using you find good cooking.

Not just because she uses Lily White Flour but because she has the power of discrimination and discernment.

She knows the difference between the Oh-I-guess-it-will-do variety and the Exactly-what-I-want kind.

It is mighty significant that the vast majority of good cooks choose, and insist on having, Lily White Flour and no other.

We suppose that's how Lily White came to be known as "The flour the best cooks use."

Anyhow it seems as though they will soon all be using it the way the demand keeps on increasing.

First Mich. Ambulance Company to Go to France.

The 1st Michigan Ambulance company of Detroit, will be the first ambulance company of the 117 Sanitary train of the 42nd division to leave America for France. This is quite an honor to come to the Michigan company and is a result of the splendid work of this unit while at El Paso, Texas last year. The company is made up of 152 men and five officers, under Capt. Robt. J. Baskerville of Detroit. This is the largest company in the whole Michigan brigade.

The members of the Ambulance companies come in for special distinction due to the hazardous work they must perform. They are stationed in the war zones, directly back of the first firing lines. They must go about their work fearlessly and without regard to flying bullets, provide first aid to wounded soldiers and carry them to the rear where further aid may be applied. They are exposed to danger continually and carry no weapons of defense. It is reported that during the battle of the Somme about 350 officers of the Ambulance companies were killed.

The members of the Ambulance companies are mostly young men of high ideals, good education and clean morals. Both the Detroit and Bay City Ambulance companies boast of their members and the officers have a sense of pride in their boys.

Some of the members of the Detroit company have been quite closely associated with Grayling people and have taken special interest in our lodges. Last year, while the soldiers were in camp here and also this summer, the chairs of Grayling Masonic lodge have been filled by officers and members of the Detroit Ambulance company at every meeting of that order. The work of the members in the lodge room has been of a high order and their companionship has been most happily enjoyed. Grayling people will look forward with special interest in the important part this company is soon destined to play in France.

SCHOOL BEGINS SEPTEMBER 4TH

SEVERAL NEW TEACHERS ADDED TO TEACHING STAFF.

Grayling schools will open for work next Tuesday, Sept. 4th. Everything is in readiness for business, the teachers are expected to arrive between now and next Monday afternoon.

Among the latter there will be a few changes. Miss Olive Lytle of Gladwin, of the Central Normal school, will teach the fifth grade; Miss Ida McNeal of Grand Rapids, a graduate of the Western Normal, will teach the sixth grade; C. R. Crane, a graduate of the Cleary college and State Normal is engaged to teach the commercial classes and athletics; and Miss Sara Gladys Weir, of Laurium, Mich., a graduate of the U. of M. will teach history.

Grayling schools have a strong corps of teachers last year and as far as the new ones are concerned, Supt. Otterbein says that he fully vouches for their efficiency and fitness as teachers and feels personally that Grayling is going to have a splendid school year.

Monday afternoon at 3:45 p. m. there will be a meeting of the teachers at the school house.

Supt. Keeler of the office of Public Instruction, has written some very appropriate and timely lines which we are pleased to publish at this time. They are inspiring and we trust that every boy and girl in Crawford county will read them. They are as follows:

TUEBOR!

To the Boys and Girls of Michigan.

We are at war. Our country has called the men of the nation to its defense. On the fifth of June ten million men reported ready for orders. Many have already gone, others are on the way, many will soon depart—all to fight the powerful foe across the sea. On the door of your home we read the sign:

A MAN FROM THIS HOUSE IS IN FRANCE

FIGHTING FOR HIS COUNTRY.

We are startled, pain grips us for we know that at last war has crossed the threshold, banished joy, bid sorrow enter.

But as that fine company of men march away we feel the sober determination that speaks from their faces and at once we take courage for we know they will meet the terrors of the battlefield—death itself—as Americans always have when duty called.

I chanced the other day to travel a little way with an old man, a tried and true American. He was bound for his old home to celebrate his birthday where four-score years ago he was born. The brown button on his breast told me he was of the Grand Army of the Republic. I asked him about the service and he told me of four years of fighting for the Union—of battles, wounds, lingering death in prison pens, incredible suffering.

"That was a terrible trial!" I exclaimed. "I marvel that you lived through it."

The old veteran replied simply: "I did my part. I obeyed orders."

That speech comes to me again and again—I DID MY PART, I OBEYED ORDERS.

On the fourth of September Uncle Sam will call a army which surpasses all the armed hosts of Europe. More than twenty million boys and girls will report at the Public school, the training camp of American democracy.

And here are the orders of the Commander-in-Chief:

Boys and Girls of America: I have always need of you. You are my Grand Army of Preparedness. I summon you to your tasks for the safety of the Republic. The worst enemy in our land is the ignorant man or woman. You are to be intelligent men and women. Every time you get a lesson well you strike a blow at ignorance.

But today I am much in need of you. I am distressed by enemies across the sea. I depend upon you, boys and girls, to help destroy their power for they would rob us of the liberty we enjoy.

How can you do this?

Every boy and girl that breathes deep, sleeps well, and eats right serves our country.

Every boy that pulls a weed and plants a seed feeds an American boy in the trenches and, besides, puts food in the pantry while father is at the front.

Every girl that makes a bandage soothes a soldier's pain; and when she sweeps and dusts a room gives mother added strength to meet the care and grief that mothers always bear in cruel war.

Boys and girls, be strong, work hard. Do the dishes and keep the woodbox full. On every home put up the sign:

THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF THIS HOUSE DO THEIR PART—THEY OBEY ORDERS.

Supt. Public Instruction.

STATE OFFICIALS VISITS MILITARY CAMP.

State Plans Medical Care of Guardsmen.

Governor Sleeper and party arrived at the Grayling station at 7 o'clock Sunday morning. They were met by the Thirty-first regiment commanded by Colonel Pack, and escorted to the new officers' club on brigade hill, where breakfast was served. In the party were Governor Sleeper, Coleman C. Vaughn, secretary of state; Samuel Odell, state treasurer; Colonel Albert E. Peterman, Burt D. Cady, and Fred W. Green, of the governor's staff; Colonel John S. Bersey, Major M. J. Phillips, Colonel Roy C. Vandercook, Major Ralph D. Duff, Hugh McNair and George English.

The governor announced the object of the visit was to bid farewell to the Michigan brigade, which he believes will be in Waco within the month. Following a brigade review at 4 o'clock he addressed the men, telling them the honor of the state had been placed in their hands and that he was convinced they would uphold it with dignity.

2,000 VISITORS IN CAMP.
About 2,000 visitors were present from all parts of the state. Hundreds of them came in automobiles and trains entering Grayling Saturday and Sunday. Although the day was cloudy, it was warmer than for the two previous days.

Most of the governor's party remained over night, occupying the officers' club for the first time. Ten sleeping rooms had been prepared for them, besides the parlors and lounge rooms on the main floor.

All furnishings are plain, but of rich quality and elicited favorable comment from the many visitors.

The club for the officers was a present from Rasmus Hanson of this city and was built this summer at a cost of about $20,000. It is a beautiful structure located near brigade headquarters and commands a fine view of the grounds and Portage lake. It has a twelve-foot porch extending the entire length of the front—140 feet and across each end. It is equipped with a 40x60 foot ball room, large lounge room with fireplace besides the sleeping quarters on the second floor. The men show their appreciation and intend to make good use of it.

From the moment a Michigan soldier is wounded in a French battlefield until he has entirely recovered, whether the period of convalescence takes place in a base hospital back of the lines or in an American hospital, he will be cared for in the minutest detail by officials of an organization now being planned by the State war preparedness board and which will be financed by that institution, according to a statement given out Sunday during a visit of Governor Sleeper at Grayling.

While the plans for the organization has not yet gone beyond the preliminary stage, they are in such shape as to give the public a fair idea of the magnitude of the undertaking.

The baseball team of the Thirty-first machine-gun company won the first ball game of the season from Company E, score, 8 to 7.

Sergeant Kilfeather, an athletic protege of Chaplain Atkinson, last year on the border, staged a 10-round bout with Jimmy Brady, a Detroit fighter with the ambulance company Monday night, the latter winning the decision in the last round.

ICE BOX CAKE.

Grayling Lady Wins First Prize For Recipe.

Last Sunday's issue of the Detroit news contained a recipe sent in by Miss Margaret Joseph of this city for "Ice box cake," which was awarded first prize for the week. The recipe is as follows:

A delicious and splendid appearing cake which is made without baking. To secure the best results, use a deep aluminum cake mold with detachable side.

Line bottom of the cake mold with lady fingers, and stand them up around the sides. In order to make them stand straight it is advisable to cut off the rounded edge on one side.

Put in a layer of chocolate filling; just enough to cover the lady fingers. Repeat this until you have three layers and then put another layer of lady fingers on top. (Otherwise the chocolate would be the top layer.) Place in the ice box for a few hours before serving.

When ready to serve, whip a half pint of cream in which a little flavoring and powdered sugar have been added. Crushed fruit may also be added. Pour the whipped cream over the top, forming the last layer. After removing the side of the tin, place on a large cake plate ready to serve.

Chocolate filling:—Take 1/2 cup of water, one cake of Baker's sweet chocolate, 1/2 cup of sugar, and four eggs well beaten. Cook in a double boiler.

FIERCEST FIGHTING OF WAR

Russia's Military, Economic and Political Troubles Are Disturbing European Peace Proposals Discussed by President Wilson Regarded as a Piece of Coal in America.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Nothing has been so common in the past few weeks as to hear the allied leaders say that the war is being fought on a new basis. They say that the war is now being fought on a new basis, and that the allied forces are now in a position to win the war. This is a very common statement, and it is one that is often repeated. But is it true? Is the war now being fought on a new basis? Is the allied forces now in a position to win the war? These are the questions that are being asked by the public. And the answer is that the war is still being fought on the same basis, and that the allied forces are still in a position to win the war. The war is still being fought on the same basis, and the allied forces are still in a position to win the war. ## MICHIGAN MAN TO BUY BEANS FOR U.S.

W. J. ORR OF SAGINAW SELECTED TO DO PURCHASING FOR ARMY AND NAVY.

HOARDING OF BEANS ILLEGAL

Buyers Will Not Be Allowed to Store Purchases—Eliminate Gambling to Keep Down Price.

Saginaw—With the return to this city of William J. Orr, president of the Michigan Bean Growers' association, announcement is made that all beans for the army and navy will be distributed by Mr. Orr in Saginaw.

All purchases of beans will be made through the local office and will be shipped from the most advantageous point in the bean growing section of the country.

There will be no hoarding of beans, Mr. Orr has announced, and Mr. Orr will, as chairman of the national bean committee, see that the measures are carried out. Dealings in futures will also be prohibited.

The farmer or producer is exempt, according to Mr. Orr. The plan is to be allowed cost, plus a fair profit on his investment. Beans will be sold through the legitimate channels.

Buyers will not be allowed to store beans and through this action it is believed the price will be kept down. No member of the national bean committee will participate in the allotments to dealers of army and navy orders.

SOLDIER DROPS DEAD AT DRILL

South Haven Boy Stricken With Heart Disease on Parade Grounds.

Mobilization Camp, Grayling. While participating in company physical exercises Monday morning, William Smith, 18 years old of Grand Haven, a member of company 15, thirty-second infantry, dropped dead on the parade ground. The cause of death was acute dilation of the heart. His brother Frank, a member of the same company, was drilling in the squad with him. Smith died May 3, a civil war veteran.

Medical reserve officers who examined the members of the Michigan regiment now camped here, reported many men who were without physical flaw and accepted others whose physical imperfections should have barred them from the army. As a result, a large percentage of the sickness in camp today may be laid at their doors, according to a high infantry official.

There are men in my regiment, said the medical officer, whose shortcomings are so palpable that the ordinary lay man should be able to recognize them. And yet, the examining officers turned down several hundred men of the most minor defects, which further examinations would have held.

Many of the men they passed are now in the hospital and will be there a large part of the time they remain in the army and will not only be useless themselves, but will take up the time of other men caring for them.

SMOKE TO PROTECT U.S. SHIPS

All-American Craft to Be Equipped With Smoke Producers.

Washington. Thousands of smoke producers to protect American merchant and military ships from submarines are being turned out daily by a government contractor in Delaware. At first only one ship of each type was to be equipped with them. All vessels of the navy will be so equipped.

The smoke producers will be used only as a last resort. Twelve smoke boxes will be on every vessel's deck. Should one of the boxes fail to operate, the ship will be equipped with a spare.

The government hopes to save thousands of tons of shipping by these producers.

PUZZLE—FIND THE LIAR

MOBILIZATION TIME CHANGED

ONLY FIVE PER CENT OF NEW ARMY TO BE CALLED TO CAMP SEPTEMBER 5.

ORIGINAL ORDER CALLED 30%

Forty Per Cent to Be Called Sept. 19, 40 Per Cent Oct. 3, and Last 15 Per Cent Soon Thereafter.

Washington—Provost Marshal General Crowder sent to governors of states an order changing the proportion of the various state quotas of men selected for the national army, that were required to be furnished on certain dates.

The new order calls for 5 per cent of each state's quota to report at cantonments September 5, 10 per cent September 19, 40 per cent October 3, and the remaining 45 per cent as soon thereafter as practicable.

Reasons for the change were given by General Crowder as follows: "In announcing the decision to mobilize only 5 per cent of the national army on September 5 instead of 30 per cent, the opportunity is taken to give to local and district boards the credit due them for the overwhelming amount of work they have accomplished in scrutinizing the thousands of men who are necessary for them to examine."

Reports received from practically every state in the union show that every state would have ready much more than 30 per cent of its quota September 5 and the majority of them would have been ready with their entire quotas on that date. This service has required a month of the most exacting work on the part of boards. This work was consummated under adverse conditions and is in large part uncompensated.

It stands as one of the most significant expressions of substantial patriotism and devotion on the part of 15,000 men selected from among the best citizens of the country.

In order that it may not be necessary to make any special railway arrangements and to prevent a congestion of personnel between points, the boards should be instructed to send 50 per cent of their quota on each of five successive days, beginning September 5.

SENDING MAIL TO SOLDIERS

How Letters for the Boys in Camps Should Be Addressed.

Washington. Before long several thousand young men will be in the various training camps of the national army and their relatives and friends will wish to write to them. In order to expedite the delivery of their mail and give the boys the best service possible, the post office department has prepared the following instructions for the sending of mail to soldiers.

It is known in advance the company and regiment to which the soldier is assigned, and the address may be given in the following manner:

PRIVATE JOHN JONES
A Company, First Infantry
Camp Dodge, Iowa

The company and regiment are not known, the mail should be addressed thus:

PRIVATE JOHN JONES
of Minnesota
Camp Dodge, Iowa

When all troops are organized the mail for each man will be distributed direct to his company and regiment. Then it will be delivered through the state section.

Private John Jones, of Minnesota, who was assigned to the first company of the first regiment, should be addressed thus:

DEPENDENT WIFE WILL EXEMPT MAN

PRESIDENT ORDERS THAT WIFE SHOULD NOT BE FORCED TO SUPPORT SELF.

MANY PROTESTS CAUSE CHANGE

If Wife or Children Are Dependent On Man's Earnings for Support He Will Be Discharged.

Washington—President Wilson Saturday ruled that wives of men selected in the draft should not, because they had employment before marriage, be thrown upon their own resources or upon charity of their own or their husband's parents for support.

He ordered that all men upon whose labors their wives or children depend entirely for support should be exempt. This action was taken in response to nationwide protests against the interpretation placed on the draft law by Provost Marshal Gen. Crowder's office that a woman whose parents or whose husband's parents were able and willing to support her and her children, or who was qualified to gain her own support, should be thrown upon those resources and her husband sent to war.

Provost marshal Crowder explained that part of the law pertaining to dependents, as follows: "That if a man has been dependent for the support of his family not on his own efforts and labor, but on the assistance which was given him by his own or his wife's parents, he will not be subject to exemption. But if his wife and his children if any, are dependent upon his own earnings for their support, whether he has parents able to support the wife and children, he will be discharged."

"It must be understood, however, that this does not apply if part of his income on which he supports his wife and children is derived from a continuing source—that is, a legacy, an estate, land holdings, stocks, bonds or similar holdings, the income from which would continue to flow in to the wife during his absence and adequate support her. The same is true if she has such a source of income."

"But, if the livelihood of the woman and children, if any, depends entirely or principally upon the man's earnings, he is subject to discharge."

The new order will be effective immediately.

U. S. BUILDS 3 NEW SHIP YARDS

Approximately $35,000,000 to Be Spent for Sites and Ways.

Washington—Construction of three enormous government-owned fabricating plants will be undertaken at once by the United States to add to her great merchant fleet, now being built in private yards.

Approximately $35,000,000 will be expended in building three new yards, each of 5,000 to 7,500 tons each are planned.

Yards will be located as follows: One at Newark, N. J., which the American International corporation will construct for at least 200 vessels; one at Hog Island, near Philadelphia, where the submarine boat company will do the work, and the third at Chester, Pa., to be built by the Merchants Shipbuilding company.

All vessels in these three yards will be in addition to those on private ways recently commandeered by the government and the ships to be constructed at plants owned by private interests.

TASTY EATS.

A sandwich filling is so often used and a variety of combinations are so welcome that those following may be suggestive.

Gooseberry jam mixed with cream cheese, or chopped cherries mixed with cottage cheese.

A sandwich for state occasions when a most nourishing one is needed is one of peanut butter used as a filling between two thin slices of sweet chocolate.

Take equal parts of diced banana and pineapple, mashed to a pulp, and mix with strawberry jam. This is a great favorite with the boys.

Mix together the solid portion of ripe tomatoes, sliced cucumber, chopped chives or onion tops and crushed well-cooked bacon with cottage cheese. Spread on buttered rye bread.

A thin slice of salt pork dipped in butter and fried a nice brown, then placed between layers of chow-chow on buttered bread is a tasty sandwich, well liked.

Spinach well cooked and seasoned and rubbed with hard-cooked egg. Raisin bread cut in heart shapes and spread with fudge enriched with nut meats is a sweet sandwich which will take the place of cake. These may be made in the ordinary way or the hot fudge may be poured on the slices and allowed to cool before the top slice is added.

Alma beans put through a sieve, seasoned with melted butter, a little onion juice and a pinch of mustard, a few chopped olives and a dash of tomato catsup spread on brown bread.

Corn Delicacies.—Put well popped corn through the food-chopper with a few walnut meats and a little melted butter until the beaten white of an egg with two tablespoons of sugar. Spread on round crackers sandwiched together and decorated the top with the same mixture and the half of a walnut meat. Bake in the oven until brown.

Patty Pie.—Fill large paper ice cans with any seasonable fruit cooked in sirup, and top the fruit with ice cream. Spread around the edges and bake with a fork. Mark a leaf in the center to resemble a pie and serve at once.

Nut and Cheese Roast.—Cook two tablespoons of chopped onion in a tablespoonful of butter, add three-fourths of a cupful of water and cook until the onion is tender, add a cupful of chopped nut meats, a cupful of cheese, a cupful of bread crumbs, salt and pepper to taste, the grated rind of a lemon and the juice of half a lemon. Turn into a buttered mold and bake twenty minutes. Decorate with lemon and parsley.

Better to watch the fields for health than to play the doctor for a nervous straight.

PRESERVING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES FOR WINTER.

To save cans for fruits it is wise to dry corn and many prefer the flavor to that of canned corn.

Select young ears, husk and plunge into boiling water and boil five minutes. To set the milk. Slice from the cob and arrange on the drying trays, spreading as thin as possible, but into the oven or ground the stove to dry as quickly as possible. Corn should be put in the trays for drying within an hour from the time it is pulled from the stalk. This insures a dry sweet flavor. The corn is soaked and cooked in the same water until tender, then dressed with cream and a dash of salt and pepper, making a dish that may, but never has, been equaled.

Salted Beans.—Take young tender string beans, preferably in the fall, string and cut them as for the table. In a stone crock put a layer of coarse salt just covering the bottom. Then put in a layer of raw beans about an inch deep, another layer of salt, just covering the beans and so on, ending with the salt. Tie a piece of muslin over the top of the jar and in a day or two, they will settle and more beans, and more salt may be added. Crock holding several quarts are set in the cellar, where the beans will keep their color and flavor. When wanted, remove a few and soak them over night changing the water occasionally until they are right for eating.

Canning Tomatoes.—Scald the tomatoes and remove the stem and carefully plunge in cold water to hold the coloring matter near the surface. Then remove the skins and pack whole in jars, adding a teaspoonful of salt to every quart of the tomatoes. Place on a rack in a boiler and cover the jars to the depth of an inch above the highest jar. When they begin to boil count the time and cook thirty minutes for quarts and twenty for pints. The tops should be screwed down tight. When removing them be sure to tighten the tops, pressing down the edge of the cover with the handle of a knife to be sure that there is no way for bacteria to enter. To further secure the fruit dip the can tops into hot paraffin and place in a cool dark cellar.

I feel it my duty to emphasize that the food situation is one of utmost gravity, which, unless it is solved, may possibly result in the collapse of everything we hold dear in civilization. The only hope is by the elimination of waste and actual and rigorous sacrifices on the part of American people. We do not ask that they should starve themselves, but that they should eat plenty, wisely and without waste.

—Herbert Hoover.

BARLEY DISHES.

Barley has been used for years in invalid cookery for broths and as infant food. High-grade barley contains as much protein as hard wheat. It furnishes starch, fat and mineral matter in equal amounts with wheat. As barley lacks gluten, when flour must be added to barley meal or flour to make successful bread, using one part of whole wheat or white flour to two parts of barley flour. Barley meal has a similar texture to corn meal, both the flour and the meal may be obtained in many sections of the country and as the increasing demand for it grows, will be more commonly in the smaller markets. Barley cookery is being revived because of the lack of wheat flour, and we are beginning to appreciate its value as a food.

Barley Pone.—Add two cupfuls of milk to one cupful of cooked hot hominy grits or rice, three tablespoons of butter, then cool and add a half teaspoonful of salt, a cupful of barley meal sifted with two tablespoons of baking powder, then add two well-beaten eggs; pour into a buttered dish and bake in a moderate oven 35 minutes. Serve from the dish, cut in triangular shapes.

Breakfast Food.—Add a half cupful of barley meal to two cupfuls of boiling water and a half teaspoonful of salt. Cook in a double boiler one hour or in a fireless cooker over night. Serve with cream and sugar. Eggs, dates or raisins may be added if desired.

Barley Soups.—Take a cupful each of whole wheat flour, a cupful of barley meal, a half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoons of baking powder, two tablespoons of beef drippings or any sweet fat, three-fourths of a cupful of sour milk or sour cream may be substituted, omitting the dripping and a half of a teaspoonful of soda. If the fat is used, cut it in as for pastry and proceed as usual in the mixing. Roll out half-inch thick and cut in diamond shapes. Brush with egg and sprinkle with sugar.

And the pharisee saith to the scribe: More deep in the guiding cloud: For he saith: "The wheat is my care, And the rest is the will of God."

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

Close your eyes when using the telephone. This not only respects the eyes but is good for the tired nerves, says the oculist.

Patrol hoops green and use them as supports for by-branches bushes, and other bushy plants which fall down and become broken by the wind.

A small salt sock folded many times until a small square is formed, then slipped into a clothespin makes a good saddle-pin fastener. The cloth may be renewed whenever necessary.

When driving with a small child, if her dress is spread so you can sit upon it, you will be able to support a rather small child safely and still manage the reins. One mother pinned a small box for her small child when driving in the auto. The child was comfortable and so was the mother, as she did not fear for its safety.

The children love to cut out pictures of fruit from catalogues and one housewife pastes them on her cans of fruit instead of labels, making a most attractive-looking fruit closet.

Never try to pick up bits of glass. Wet a wooden cloth and put it around the glass. The fragments will cling to it and the hands are saved the danger.

A thrifty wife keeps a list of the things she needs to have attended to about the house. This list is placed where her husband is sure to see it, and when each is attended to is checked off.

Frosted Date Cakes.—Beat a third of a cupful of shortening, add a cupful of sugar and two eggs well-beaten, a half cupful of milk, one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour sifted with two tablespoons of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg, a half teaspoonful of cinnamon. Bake in gem pans. Cover with frosting and decorate with a stoned date.

'DIFFERENT' IN ITS ROOM ARRANGEMENT

The Little Bungalow Described Here Just Right Size for Family of Two.

BRICK, STUCCO, WOOD WALLS

Interior Plan and Conveniences Will Delight Any Housewife and Have Special Attraction for the Fall Bride.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.
Mr. William A. Radford, 4122 N. 12th St., Chicago, Ill., is the author of the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 122 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The little bungalow shown in the accompanying perspective view and floor plan is interesting in that its arrangement is quite out of the ordinary. The exterior is finished in quite a simple manner, although its appearance is not lacking in any respect. The walls of the house are given the character of three materials. The foundation walls above grade are of face brick. Above this and carried up to the head trim of the windows, the walls are finished with narrow beveled siding. Under the gable ends the walls are finished up to the roof with shubert stucco. The perspective view gives some slight idea of the rustic appearance of the low-pitch gable roof. The roof itself is unadorned—characterized by clean, sharp-cut outlines and a careful balance. The appearance is dependent upon the correct selection of pitch and the general outline of the roof rather than upon elaborate ornamentation. There are two brackets under each gable end, these being appropriate to the shubert stucco wall surface; they constitute the only ornaments which are required to give the building the appearance-effect which the designer has deemed most appropriate for this particular structure.

It will be noticed that the raftering of the terrace are of face brick, while those of the porch, on the other side of the house are of wood siding. While this construction does not take anything from the effectiveness of the design and is really included for the purpose of removing any trace of what some people call a "split" effect, meaning that there is too methodical adherence to the symmetrical, it might be criticized by some, in which case there is no reason why either the one or the other of the railings cannot be altered to conform with the other. If the change is desired, it would undoubtedly be better in the porch railing walls, which would be constructed of face brick, with a white stone or concrete coping in order that conformity might exist between the foundation, terrace and porch walls. The terrace floor and steps are of concrete. The porch floor as shown in the illustrations is of wood flooring, the steps are concrete. If the porch walls were to be changed to brick, the porch floor would be better if built of concrete.

This house is 41 feet wide, not including the extension of the terrace beyond the wall of the house or the steps of the porch. The depth is 31 feet 6 inches from the front wall of the living room to the rear wall of the dining room. It could hardly be built on a lot having less than a 30-foot frontage, and is, therefore, unsuitable for extremely crowded locations, but this is true of almost any bungalow. The bungalow requires plenty of room or its appearance is destroyed. One of the particularly pleasant features of this house is the facility which it provides for lawn decoration. Across practically the entire front of the house the wall surface is unbroken near grade. The appearance of the house and the lawn would be very much beautified during the summer months by a carefully selected bed of flowers planted near the house along the front wall.

This house is one of the type which looks best when elevated slightly above the street grade, unless it can be built back quite a distance from the street sidewalk. The house, standing on itself, is somewhat lacking in height and is made so purposely so that it will have the best possible appearance when built on either a terrace or sloping lot. It is an advantage to build a house slightly above the surrounding ground if possible, especially when the ground is known to be normally water bearing, because of the better drainage which is possible.

Even better than the exterior qualities of this bungalow is the interior arrangement. In the real test of a home, the convenience of its interior, the ease with which it may be kept clean and the comfort which it provides are the vitally important factors. A house cannot be called a good investment if it is not satisfactory in regard to these things, no matter how beautiful its exterior may be.

The bungalow shown in the perspective view is built around the living room and the dining room. Since these rooms are ordinarily the most used and the most noticeable rooms in the house, it is logical that they should be treated with special attention. Here they are made equal in size and are placed one behind the other, with attractive French doors between. At the front of the living room there is a door on either side, one leading to the terrace and the other to the porch. The fireplace is built into the corner of this room where it forms an attractive feature and permits the use of single chimney with two flues to serve the furnace, fireplace and kitchen range.

The kitchen has been given considerable attention. A counter is placed beneath the window and two cupboards are provided. The sink is handy to the counter. A little pantry leads to the convenience of the refrigerator. There are shelves and a table in the pantry. An entry from the porch furnishes plenty of room for the refrigerator. The stairs leading to the basement are framed in just to the rear of the kitchen and a small room which may be used either as a bedroom or as a den occupies the rear corner of the house.

The full-sized bedrooms, two in number, are located on the other side of the central living and dining rooms.

The rooms thus placed conform to the very best design practice in bedroom arrangement. It provides windows in two walls for each room and, by the use of the small hall connecting these rooms with the bath, makes them independent of one another without the loss of a foot of space. This hall is entered from the dining room near the French door leading to the living room. This plan stands for space economy in every part. It provides convenience and comfort in full proportion to the cost.

HIGHER GRADE OF 'NONCOMS'

Good Material for Chevrons Is Seen in Men Drafted for the New National Army.

There is a growing feeling among the student officers at Plattsburg, a feeling already prevalent among their instructors, that in the main the quality of the draft is going to be remarkably high. Herbert Reed writes in the New York Independent. It is the thing the regular army has been waiting for all these years. And the reason is simple. It is felt that it will be the army's great opportunity to march the elite sort of material for noncommissioned officers. It is no objection on the "noncom" of the old regime, who, by the way, is to have his long deferred chance for promotion, to say that in the mass the army expects better material.

The new men will meet in many cases, probably in most cases, as on

Did Richard farmers possess immune seed? Not at all. The smut had simply been killed through treatment of the seed before planting. In the other districts no such precautions were observed.

In Michigan as a whole the losses from smut this season are not the way from 5 to 40 per cent of the crop in the different districts. If we place the average loss in the state at five per cent of the crop, and it was all of that, it means that smut destroyed the least 700,000 bushels of grain, or four county agout, or write direct to the Michigan Agricultural College, but regardless of whether you prefer the old method, the loss of them should be used. It is the duty of every farmer now to insure his wheat crop. NO LETUP IN EDUCATION

Colleges Will Open as Usual, Despite War and Its Handicaps.

East Lansing, Mich.—Despite the announcement of radical changes made by a number of the best educational institutions under the spell of the new conditions brought on by the war, Michigan will during the coming year, continue its educational work as usual. At least this is the announced coming from the Michigan Agricultural College, and there are signs that other of the state's schools of higher learning will follow M. A. C.'s lead.

Some of the seaboard schools will open on October 1, or even later in the fall, and close earlier in the spring, but at M. A. C. the term will begin on September 21 in all four divisions of the college—engineering, agricultural, home economics and veterinary medicine.

There is at present no reason why our schools should begin making changes," said President Kedzie in a recent public statement. "If it becomes necessary, decisions to shorten courses and terms can be arrived at over night and put into effect almost as quickly. We propose to proceed as we would normally until it becomes apparent that changes must be made."

Recent inquiries made by M. A. C. indicate that practically all M. A. C. students who weren't called out for military duty will be continued at the college, so that boys desiring to acquire military training along with their

NEW SMUT REMEDY SIMPLE AND SURE

Concentrated Formaldehyde, M. A. C. Specialist Says, Effectively Protects Wheat From Disease.

ITEM OF COST IS SLIGHT

Spores Can Be Killed at Expense of Less Than Two Cents Per Bushel of Grain Sprayed.

By DR. G. H. COONS,
Plant Pathologist, Michigan Agricultural College.

East Lansing, Mich.—Practically all Michigan farmers who have ever grown wheat know the meaning and the smell of stinking smut, though their intimacy with it varies with different communities. Kalchauer county affords an object lesson. In and around Richland, in this county, where there is a community of agricultural live wires, the losses this season from smut were slight, but not a dozen miles away is another group of growers whose grain, when threshed, gave off smut clouds worse than the smut from a factory chimney. The smut losses in the latter instance ran as high as 25 per cent and more of the crop.

Why the difference in the amount of smut damage in two communities? After the grain is thoroughly sprayed, it should be covered with blankets or awnings for four hours—no longer—and then spread out thinly for an airing. After this the grain is ready for planting.

Last fall, under the direction of County Agent Smith, a number of farmers in Kent county tried out the new method. They secured perfect stands and perfect smut control at a cost of not more than two cents a bushel.

Of course the man who doesn't care to use the concentrated formaldehyde remedy can still do the job in the old way by using dilute formaldehyde. The difference between the new way and the old is simply this—in one case the pure, concentrated formaldehyde is used just as it comes from the drug store; in the old method the diluted solution is employed. By using the concentrated formaldehyde all the bother of splashing around in a lot of water and waiting for the grain to dry afterwards is done away with. It is the formaldehyde that kills the smut in both methods.

If there is any doubt at all about the way to apply either treatment, the thing to do is to get in touch with your county agent, or write direct to the Michigan Agricultural College. But regardless of whether you prefer the old method, the loss of them should be used. It is the duty of every farmer now to insure his wheat crop. No matter how clean the seed may be, and no matter how highly recommended it comes from the seedman, treatment is the only sure means of safety.

There was a time when treating seed for smut was somewhat of a tiresome and laborious process, but it is no longer so. Heretofore most farmers who have been disinfecting their seed wheat used the dilute formaldehyde method, but now there is a way of making the job even simpler. This new smut remedy is known as the "concentrated formaldehyde method," first devised by Cornell university.

With this treatment the formaldehyde is used just as it comes from the drug store, that is, without being diluted. The seed wheat is simply spread in a long heap on the barn floor. Then one man sprays the grain with the concentrated formaldehyde while another shovels it over, turning it from one pile into another just as you would cement. The spraying can be done with a small hand atomizer of pint or quart size. One pint of formaldehyde is used for 50 bushels of grain. Where smaller quantities than 50 bushels are planted, correspondingly smaller amounts of formaldehyde are used—a half pint for 25 bushels, or a quarter of a pint for ten bushels.

After the grain is thoroughly sprayed, it should be covered with blankets or awnings for four hours—no longer—and then spread out thinly for an airing. After this the grain is ready for planting.

GAME FISHING

By DIXIE CARDOLL
Author of LAKE and STREAM GAME FISHING

FLY-CASTING FOR BASS.

My Dear Buck: Going after the husky bass with the right fly rod is sure the right system of fishing. If you have a desire to cultivate the tingling nerves and the thumping pulse, nothing in the game will give you more thrills than to have a two or three pound bass take the lures and then try to shake 'em loose—that is, of course, if you are handling the working end of the rod. And if this old bass is a stream-raised youngster, he will give you more fight than any other fish, weight for weight.

Wading a stream and whipping the water in a semicircle as you go along is far more enjoyable than lake fly-fishing, and at the same time a stream that can be waded makes about the best kind of bass water for the use of the fly. The shallow pools above and below riffles or rapids is a likely spot for the hungry bass as well as the eddies along the sides of rapids. Cast into the swirl of water as it passes around a bowlder and off the edge of the windfalls, logs and brush heaps, all of which locations are generally the landing place of a fine old bass.

In lake fishing with the fly the bright, sunny day is not for you. The bass rise to the fly particularly on a day when the surface is broken by a slight breeze, and the best time for casting is in the early morning and late in the evening. From sunset to dark is the best time when the day has been bright—in fact, most any day. On the lake cast your fly inshore on the bars and shallows or ledges and off the edges of lily pads, rushes and weed beds, as well as alongside the half-submerged logs and windfalls along shore. The fly should be allowed to sink considerably and a slightly jerky crawl given to it when working in the line. This is done to fool the bass into believing the object of the fly-caster's art is a struggling insect trying to get out of the water.

Better to Fish Downstream. On the stream it is preferable to fish downstream, as the bass lie with the head upstream and with the current carrying your fly on its natural course. The bass have more chance to see it and thus become a possible candidate for the creek. Then, again, it is far easier to wade downstream than it is going up.

For dark days and early evening fly-fishing, the darker flies, and the brighter days the darker flies. Smaller flies of a subdued color tied on a No. 6 or 7 hook is right for low, clear water on a bright day, while, after sunset and moonlight casting the gray, white and brown flies tied on a larger hook, a No. 2 or 4 size, are more likely to attract the fish than the smaller ones.

For rough and turbid water the brightly colored feathers are best. In selecting your flies don't overlook the black, brown, gray and buckles; you will often find that the old reliable hackles will bring a rise after you have tried every other combination in your fly book.

Nearly every fellow who whips the light fly rod has his own particular selection of flies, and by these he swears like a pagan; however, for the beginner, besides the hackles the following selection will give a fairly varied assortment that will pass muster until he crooks the first fish at the fly used at that time will no doubt be given the place of honor in his list. I have more chance to see it and thus become a possible candidate for the creek. Then, again, it is far easier to wade downstream than it is going up.

I have more chance to see it and thus become a possible candidate for the creek. Then, again, it is far easier to wade downstream than it is going up.

For dark days and early evening fly-fishing, the darker flies, and the brighter days the darker flies. Smaller flies of a subdued color tied on a No. 6 or 7 hook is right for low, clear water on a bright day, while, after sunset and moonlight casting the gray, white and brown flies tied on a larger hook, a No. 2 or 4 size, are more likely to attract the fish than the smaller ones.

For rough and turbid water the brightly colored feathers are best. In selecting your flies don't overlook the black, brown, gray and buckles; you will often find that the old reliable hackles will bring a rise after you have tried every other combination in your fly book.

Nearly every fellow who whips the light fly rod has his own particular selection of flies, and by these he swears like a pagan; however, for the beginner, besides the hackles the following selection will give a fairly varied assortment that will pass muster until he crooks the first fish at the fly used at that time will no doubt be given the place of honor in his list. I have more chance to see it and thus become a possible candidate for the creek. Then, again, it is far easier to wade downstream than it is going up.

For dark days and early evening fly-fishing, the darker flies, and the brighter days the darker flies. Smaller flies of a subdued color tied on a No. 6 or 7 hook is right for low, clear water on a bright day,

Wants Crawford County Red Cross To Increase Membership.

The following letter addressed to T. W. Hanson, chairman of Crawford County chapter of American Red Cross, is self explanatory and should be of interest to every resident of Crawford county.

It reads as follows:

Aug. 17th, 1917.
Mr. T. W. Hanson, Chairman,
Crawford County Chapter,
American Red Cross,
Grayling, Michigan.

My dear Sir:
I want to visit with you a little about the subject of Red Cross membership. Michigan has done well, over 350,000 members on July 1st or about 10% of the entire population of the State. This reflects credit upon the state, but if we deduct Detroit's 135,000 and Grand Rapids' 38,000, which is about 25% of the population in each case, the remainder of the state as a whole is substantially below 10% of its population. The test of supremacy is the ratio between the Red Cross membership and the population. In Illinois, Indiana and other neighboring states most strenuous efforts to obtain a conspicuous membership record are now in progress. The quota in Illinois and Indiana for each Chapter is 20% of the population within its jurisdiction. The State boards in those states are producing Chapters on this subject in a way that we would not feel at liberty to follow. This will be our only effort for some time in that direction. 350,000 Michigan members will not look fine if another state similarly populated should be found on October 1st to have 600,000, and that situation may arise. We have reason to believe that by the test above mentioned Michigan is now ahead of every other state in the Union, and of course, we all hope it may remain so, and that in respect of membership, at least, it will be the Banner Red Cross state. It all depends on the future work of the Chapters. It is our earnest hope that each Chapter will voluntarily fix its quota at 25% of the present population, to be realized by October 1st. It is an attainable quota in nearly if not every county. In several counties of Michigan the ratio is already nearly, or quite, 25%.

We are fully alive to the fact that membership is not everything in Red Cross work. We would not argue against the proposition that the production in large quantities of surgical dressings, hospital garments, and other Red Cross supplies is more important than a lot of members. But membership is important in itself. Membership fees help to buy materials entering into the production of Red Cross supplies, and presumably the more members the more workers in the production of such supplies.

According to the report on July 1st there were 680 members in your Chapter. The population of the county in 1910, according to the United States census, was 3,984, doubtless more now. You will see that the ratio is quite good. Why not double it before October 1st and stand a chance of being at the head of the list?

In October the figures for each Chapter will be given to the Michigan press. The July figures have already been sought, but have been withheld because we felt that they did not in many cases reflect the Chapter's real strength.

Very truly yours,
Frederick W. Stevens, B. C.
Chairman,
Diet at Ann Arbor

BRADY GETS DECISION OVER KILLFEATHER.

Decides Lightweight Championship of Michigan. Match Held at Mobilization Camp.

The lightweight championship match between Jimmy Brady, an honorary member of Ambulance company No. 1, and Private Killfeather of the 31st Michigan infantry, was pulled off in the mess hall at the Military Reservation last Monday night. Brady was challenged by Killfeather and the latter had been saying, according to some of the members of the Ambulance company, that he was going to put Brady out of business. Considerable talk had been going around about the affair and by the time the ropes had been stretched the large mess hall was packed.

Brady had the best of the match in every round except in the sixth when Killfeather got in some lucky punches and damaged his opponent. Brady, after the sixth round came back stronger than ever and in a clever, clean manner had Killfeather at his mercy. Friends of the latter stopped the fight in the last round to save him from further punishment.

Killfeather proved himself a plucky fighter and endured terrific punishment, had a good offensive as well as defensive but was out-classed by Brady in every round except the sixth. Brady was challenged that night by a member of the 32nd regiment for a match next Monday night but the officers of the Ambulance company decline to continue this class of sport.

Local News

J. C. Burton and family are entertaining his nephew of Saginaw, who came yesterday.

Miss Carrie Swaffield of Bay City is expected to come today for a visit with Miss Mildred Bates.

Miss Agnes Havens has as her guest her cousin, Miss Ruth Gauss of Duluth, Minn. Miss Gauss expects to remain for an indefinite time.

There are quantities of wood in the pond at the electric light plant that would make good fuel. Permission is given to anyone wanting wood to help themselves and they will be welcome to have free all they may take. As the pond will be filled soon, those wishing to avail themselves of this opportunity should do so at once.

There will be a benefit entertainment at the Temple theatre tomorrow night, (Friday) for the Red Cross of Crawford county. The program is not quite ready thus we cannot give it to our readers. However we will assure the people that they will be nicely entertained if they attend. It will begin at 8:00 p. m. You are cordially invited. Watch for advertising posters.

Mrs. J. E. Crowley, yesterday sold her millinery stock to Mrs. Nina A. Griffith of Gaylord. Mrs. Crowley has been in the business here for the past eight years, and has had marked success. She disliked giving up the work, but felt as she was more needed in her home. Mrs. Griffith owns a millinery store in Gaylord. She will have a trimmer to take charge of the work here and will herself spend a part of each week here. She will open some time next week for business, with a new stock of fall and winter millinery. We welcome Mrs. Griffith to our city and wish her a fine patronage.

Charles Baker, who was recently arrested for breaking and entering Larson's saloon, and was awaiting trial in Circuit court, broke jail at midnight Saturday and escaped. Sheriff Cody got busy and sent out warnings to all neighboring towns. He, himself, started in pursuit and the first evidence of the whereabouts of the fugitive was had from south east of Lewiston. Tuesday night, Sheriff Cody finally ran him down eight miles north of Lewiston, in the woods. The fugitive started to run when first discovered, but a bullet whizzing close to his head let him know that the sheriff meant business and he finally halted. He is once more in jail. Baker tried to break out once before by digging the mortar out of the brick wall and had a two-foot opening nearly completed when he was discovered. The last time he tricked the sheriff by hiding under a table in the first corridor while the latter entered the inner corridor to lock up a prisoner. He then slipped up and slid the cell bolt locking the sheriff in, while he made his escape. He only had a few minutes start of the sheriff but was successful in evading capture for several days.

Notice.
I will be in my office from 2:00 to 5:00 p. m. on Friday and Saturday of this week, to meet patrons of the school who may wish to call.

LONDON'S MALADY

Writer Suffered From Strange Illness In Australia.

BAFFLING TO PHYSICIANS.

Novelist Bravely Fought Mysterious Sickness Which Could Not Be Diagnosed by Australian Specialists. Finally Decided He Had Been Torn to Pieces by Ultra Violet Rays.

Sydney, Australia.—The recent death of Jack London, the California novelist, recalls the extraordinary physical reasons for his stay of about five months in Australia in 1908-9. London was a blond, and his sojourn, from what he himself subsequently wrote in "The Cruise of the Shark" and the alcoholic memoir "John Barleycorn" and those in the commonwealth who became intimate with him now remember, was one of torture. He left the cockleboat Shark, in which he and his wife had been cruising about the Pacific, at one of the islands and came.

JACK LONDON IN THE WOODS.

With Mrs. London, to Sydney in November, 1908, by steamer. He said of his Australian sojourn: "I went to Australia to go into a hospital, where I spent five weeks. I spent five months miserably sick in hotels. The mysterious malady that afflicted my hands was too much for the Australian specialists. It was unknown in the literature of medicine. No case like it had ever been reported. It extended from my hands to my feet so that at times I was as helpless as a child. On occasion my hands were twice their natural size, with seven and a half inches peeling off at the same time. There were times when my toenails in twenty-four hours grew as thick as they were long. After filing them off I had another twenty-four hours they were as thick as before. The Australian specialists agreed that the malady was non-parasitic and therefore it must be nervous."

"The illness did not mend, and the novelist and his wife had to abandon the cruise in the Shark. Yet when London had returned to California, where his health had invariably been excellent, his recovery was complete, and strangely enough the California climate is very like that of Australia. Later on London ran across the book written by Colonel Charles E. Woodruff, United States army medical corps, entitled "Effects of Tropical Light on White Men," and what had baffled the Australian specialists was no longer inexplicable. London wrote to Colonel Woodruff describing his illness in Australia, and the latter whose researches in tropical medicine, especially in the Philippines, have given him a high reputation in his profession, replied that he had been similarly afflicted in the Philippines. Besides himself, Colonel Woodruff wrote to the novelist, no fewer than sixteen other United States army surgeons were utterly at a loss to account for the colonel's malady. But in time the colonel solved the riddle. London says:

"I had a strong predisposition toward tissue destructiveness by tropical light. I had been torn in pieces by ultra violet rays."

PUTS UP EGGS AS BAIL BOND

What's More, Police Accept Them From Reckless Driver.

Hutchinson, Kan.—When J. J. Pankrat, a farmer, arrested on a charge of reckless driving, learned the amount of his bond he was unable to put up the cash and could think of no one on whom to call.

He said he had with him no personal property of value, but offered to put up a case of eggs for his appearance in police court. The bond was accepted.

Gas Kills Dogs.

St. Paul.—Guillaume and Pietro, the dog pets of Joseph Demalo, were found dead from gas fumes in their master's home. They died by their own paws. The room in which they lay was filled with gas. Demalo denies they committed suicide. He says they heard rats in the stove and in attempting to open the door of the oven turned on the gas.

Bank Robbery Foiled in Otsego County.

C. A. Quick, one of the owners of the Vanderbilt Exchange bank at Gaylord, foiled an attempted robbery Friday afternoon. A man about 25 years old, who had been seen around the village for two hours previously entered the bank as the cashier left for the postoffice. Covering Quick with a revolver the bandit demanded $1,000, but fell for the banker's trick and allowed the latter to go to the vault on the pretext of getting the money. Quick shut himself in the vault and began shouting. The man ran without obtaining anything. A posse failed to follow him in the brush.

MAXOTIRES

Maxotires are different from anything ever used before for an inner shoe to auto tires. When inserted they cement themselves to the tire thus there is no friction, and consequently there is no heating, and no chance for the Maxotire to wrinkle up and injure the inner tube.

They are wonders in cutting tire cost. They save vulcanizers' cost. They make motoring a pleasure and are guaranteed against blow-outs for one year. They have many other strong features that we cannot tell about in this small advertisement. Ask the man who is using them—there many in Grayling.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearsall of Ypsilanti, visited their sons, Frank and Guy Pearsall of the Signal Corps at Camp Ferris Sunday, also Mrs. Boor visited her son, Edward Ochmke and Mrs. Putman was the guest of her son, Clare Langdon, both of Ypsilanti.

Commencing with last evening, there will be dancing at the Temple theatre every Wednesday and Saturday evenings. The 31st Infantry who are stationed at Camp Ferris will furnish the music, and dancing starts at 8:30 o'clock. Everybody cordially invited to attend these parties.

Ransom Burgess, who has been employed at the Mills meat market for the past few months, resigned Saturday. He was among those on the first draft and passed the physical examination here and did not claim exemption. He left Saturday for Gladwin to visit friends and will remain there until he is called, which he expects will be about the first of the month. His sister Miss Marguerite, of Mackinaw City who spent last week here accompanied him to Gladwin.

Mrs. H. Hanson entertained fifteen ladies at her home last Saturday evening, in honor of Mrs. S. S. Phelps, Jr., of Detroit, who with her three daughters are the guests of relatives and friends here for a couple of weeks. "500" proved to be a pleasant pastime, and at the end of the game, Mrs. Wm. Fischer, Sr., held the highest score, and was awarded the first prize, and Mrs. F. H. Mitka, held the second. The hostess served a very nice lunch late in the evening.

Mrs. T. W. Hanson was at home to a number of ladies at Virginia Place Wednesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Peterson of Toledo, Ohio. There were about 35 ladies present and the afternoon was spent in playing cards or knitting. Mrs. Maynard and Mrs. Bauman won prizes for highest scores. Those present from out of town were Mrs. Peterson Toledo; Mrs. Graham, Miss Watson, Mrs. Frank Michelson, Miss Miller, Detroit; Mrs. F. G. Stogall, Bay City; Mrs. Benj. Jerome, Pontiac; Miss Doty, Grand Rapids.

Miss Angeline Van Patten and Glen Penard stole a march on their friends last Saturday, and were quietly married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Houghton. The ceremony, which united them in holy wedlock, was performed by Rev. Aaron Mitchell of the M. E. church and took place at the hour of four-thirty that afternoon. Miss Nellie Charlefour, and Mr. Victor Peterson of this city were the attendants. The happy young couple left on the midnight train Saturday for a short wedding trip to Saginaw, and other places. Mrs. Penard has been an efficient operator at the local telephone exchange for the past six years, and is well known in Grayling and her friends, as also the groom's wish many years of happy wedded life. Mr. Penard whose home is in West Branch, has been employed at the Walter Cowell barber shop at different times in the past few years. They expect to make their home in Bay City and expect to leave for that city tomorrow.

THE FOURTEENTH MAN

Copyright, W. G. Chapman

IT WAS a hard task that the president of one bank had given me. A standard financial institution is rarely desirous of doing business with a woman; at least beyond the mere depositor basis. In the present instance it was not only a woman, but a young and pretty one. Add to this the fact that the lady in question was in deep distress, that her case presented angles suggesting evasion and even mystery, and you will not wonder why every official of the bank from the president down to the assistant cashier had shied at the task which I was now obliged to shoulder.

"Do the best you can to get our money out of this muddle," the president had told me tersely, handing me the folder which contained all the papers in the case from the day, four years back, where Royal Ludington, member of the Board of Trade, had made his initial deposit with our bank down to and beyond the recent date of his sudden death. The record of his dealings with the institution up to the time of his demise was clear as crystal. A child could have read and understood, pretensions as to magnitude and importance as had been some of his dealings. Direct and margin accounts were clearly attended to. There was not a mark or break in the admirable paying system of Royal Ludington. When death closed the accounts, however, we held his note unsecured for $37,500; and we held it still, past due, uncollectible, to our bewilderment, in any legal way.

I familiarized myself with all the details of the case through a hurried glance over the contents of the folder, tidied collar and coat with a twist of my hand, and put on my best banking face to enter the private office of the directors' room where I had been advised Miss Grace Ludington was awaiting attention.

"I came about this," she said in a tone child-like, confident, slightly reproachful, all at once. The letter she handed me notified Mrs. Royal Ludington that the overdue paper of her dead husband required immediate settlement, rather strictly referring to the fact that no attention had been paid to previous notifications of the same fact. I turned it over and over in my hand, seeking to fix upon the manner I should assume in seeing the best interests of the bank in dealing with an emissary instead of the chief person now in interest in the case.

"I see," I observed, trying to gain time, for I am not a ready diplomat; "but why did not Mrs. Royal Ludington—your mother—the fair head bowed—come herself?"

A wave of singular intensity crossed the face of the young girl. Her lips parted to speak. Then she subdued their expression. They quivered. Her eyes dropped, her cheeks grew the paler.

"She would not come," was spoken huskily—"she will not come."

"Surely," I observed. "Mrs. Royal Ludington does not repudiate the obligation?"

"For the present—yes."

"Yet we have notifications here that show transfers of property within the past month representing over $20,000. Aside from that two notes have passed through the bank for $10,000 which she has seen fit to pay promptly. These notes were signed by your father, not by your mother. Why does she discriminate unfairly against the bank in caring for your father's obligations? I refer to the notes given by your father to one 'Abel Vandamann'."

"My message is," she said evenly, "that there are circumstances encouraging our fervent hopes, the possible relief of the bank, that you and ourselves must wait for—must."

It was her last word. With a motion of head and body that was all it should be, with the air of an impress she went from the room, and I stood staring blankly after her, analyzing every word she had said, weighing it, dissecting it, seized with a sudden inspiration and carrying it forthwith to the president of the bank. He was a man of few words and I lent myself to his system.

"It is simply—wait," I said.

He shrugged his shoulders, knowing I had done my full duty.

"No pressure possible, then, you think?"

"None at the present time. There is action possible, though," I said.

"You mean?"

"Resilius Marvel."

"Get him."

When the bank—or any other bank—said "get Resilius Marvel," it signified the abandonment of direction or opinion. It meant unrestricted power awarded Marvel, great man that he was—he, the brains, mouthpiece and active director of the great United Bankers' Protective association. Marvel was not a collector for the banks. He was the last resource, the final court of appeal in a case when the layman in investigatory science came face to face with a blank wall, drew up his cards, and left the game to an expert.

My friend listened patiently, but rather bored I fancied, to my tale-story of what had seemed quite sensational at my first impetuous view of it. He made a brief notation now and then on a tab of paper of the dry details I gave him of the Ludington affair. I had brought the folder with me, the dossier in which the credit department was supposed to store up everything concerning a client and keep it up to date. As I closed it he asked the question:

"That is all you have?"

"Except the newspaper clippings referring to the death of Mr. Ludington," I replied.

circumstances were out of the ordinary and the deceased an apparently successful business man, that the public prints had given any space to the death of the exchange trader.

It was a chill March evening when he had been found dead, lying against a building. There was no evidence whatever that he had been assaulted. The contents of his pockets were undisturbed. There were no marks of violence on his body. He carried no life insurance, but an autopsy was held by the coroner. The inquest developed nothing new. According to two expert physicians Royal Ludington had died from heart failure. He had been ailing and depressed for some time preceding his demise. There was not the slightest hint at suicide.

The police, tracing the movements of the deceased previous to his death, testified at the inquest that Ludington had been one of a small party of friends who had met at the home of Abel Vandamann. The latter was an apparently reputable business man of the city of some wealth and social standing. The occasion of the social function was the grouping up of a number of business men to whom Vandamann wished to present a stock-selling scheme to float a copper mine in Northern Michigan. A pleasant evening had passed, a few cigars, not too much wine, and the guests had departed in pleasant humor and seemingly all in the best of health. Two of the guests had walked some distance with Ludington, and had bade him good night about a square and a half from the spot where his body was later discovered.

Mrs. Ludington had testified that she knew her husband to have had business dealings for a long time previous to his death with Mr. Vandamann. The latter she understood had loaned her husband money. This was not a new phase of the character of Vandamann. His business was that of a high interest rate note shaver, but he had been always abreast enough to conceal his usurious transactions under the guise of expenses, commissions and the like.

This was the story told by the newspaper clippings I handed to Resilius Marvel. Pasted to it was a brief item dated two days later. It had been preserved in the folder because it mentioned the name of Royal Ludington. It covered a strange happening. On the evening of the funeral of the dead trader, a man had been detected in leaving by the window route the room Ludington formerly occupied at his home. A watchman had trapped him as the midnight marauder dropped to the ground. He was held until the police were summoned and was sent to the nearest police station. Upon searching him nothing whatever was found upon him. He seemed to be some homeless tramp, he had taken nothing from the room he had entered, and when questioned declared with a foolish grin that he had been looking for something to eat, struck a sleeping chamber instead of a pantry, and was too honest to steal anything more than a bite of food.

The contention of the man was carried out in the main by circumstances. The room he had entered had not been at all disturbed. Upon the bureau lay the trader's purse with some money and papers in it. This had been opened, but nothing removed. A suit of clothes in a closet had been looked over, it seemed, but not even the pockets had been searched.

The marauder, giving the name of Edward Briggs, had been brought before a police magistrate, charged with vagrancy and sent to the house of correction for sixty days.

I noticed that my friend read and re-read the little clipping telling all this. I noticed him mark on the pad the name Edward Briggs. I saw also that he copied the names of the two guests who had left the Vandamann home with the trader the night of his death. Then he arose, and I could tell by the expression of his eyes that he was ready for work. Further, I regarded him with the admiration his ability always evoked within me, for although I could not guess how, I was sure that out of the bare skeleton of facts of an unpaid note at bank, a weeping girl and two newspaper clippings, Resilius Marvel had already discovered a diverging suggestion, direct and important.

"Drop around in the morning," he said casually. "You were right to bring this case to my notice."

I told the president of our bank this later. In the light of past events in which Resilius Marvel had been concerned, as if he felt he had landed the burden of a distributing circumstance on helpful and reliable shoulders.

I found Marvel pacing the floor of his office in a thoughtful way, his hands clasped behind him, when I called the next morning. He drew out his watch and consulted it with a slight gesture of impatience, as though I had kept him waiting.

"Two minutes," he announced, "and then you will come with me. There is a person to find, and no time to lose."

"And the person?" I inquired.

"The fourth man."

I started helplessly at Marvel. He kept up his restless walk, punctuating each step with a sentence rapid and enlightening.

"There was nothing unusual nor suspicious as to the social function which transpired at the Vandamann home," spoke Marvel. "There was no motive to it, no plan or anticipation of any play. Get that clear in your mind in the first place. A strange thing occurred, however, just as the guests were about to be seated at the table were just 13 persons present."

I began to receive a glimmer of where a "fourteenth man" might come in.

"That arose which might readily arise where one man of a group is superstitious. Such a man was present—he was the man who died, Royal Ludington. He was probably in a mood for weird forebodings. Vandamann did not debate the point. He excused himself to his guests, put on his hat, went out into the street and apparently picked up the first man he met to break the hoodoo."

"And this man?" I asked.

"Known to none of them, apparently some city wreck on error's shore, a freakish contrast in his attire to the perfectly dressed guests, quietly took his place at the table, maintained the silence he was paid to maintain, ate like the hungry man he was, and then seemed to disappear, his paid mission executed."

"And you now seek to find this man?"

"He must be found," declared Marvel positively.

"Why?"

"Because I am satisfied he can explain the mystery in this case."

"There is a mystery, then?"

"A deep one. That matters not now. I wish to show you something. As a memento of the first meeting of the organizers of the Copper Queen Mining company, a flash photograph was taken. That is the group."

My friend drew from his pocket a card four by eight inches and held it before me.

"That is Vandamann," he explained, indicating the broker, whom I recognized—"that Ludington," I knew him, too. "That," and by some irony of fate the forlorn, frowny figure at the far end of the table seemed to have been focussed more prominently than any of the others—"that is the Fourteenth Man."

I studied the face with interest. Its owner was apparently one of the strays of the city to be picked up anywhere in the crowded center within a five minutes' walk.

"Come with me," directed Marvel. He hailed a taxicab as we reached the street. It conveyed us to a police station in the residence portion of the city. I followed after my friend at his bidding as he went to the office of the captain.

Marvel halted at a door—it was the day of the funeral of Royal Ludington. He gave a name. It was Edward Briggs, the man arrested at the Ludington home that same night. The official consulted the record book. He read its details ending with the sixty days' sentence of the prisoner.

"Photographed?" inquired my friend.

"So noted—No. 8796."

"That is all—thanks," nodded Marvel, and within ten minutes we were at the identification bureau.

The Fourteenth Man—Edward Briggs, he observed, as No. 8796 was produced, and he held it beside the flashlight photograph of the Vandamann function. There was no doubt as to the conclusion he had arrived at. The faces were identical. I was wondering what all this was going to lead to while the bureau official was explaining that although only a misdemeanor had been charged against the prisoner, it had been thought best to take his picture for possible past and future reference.

Marvel went over to a phone and called up the house of correction. I had done some brief calculating in my mind. Edward Briggs had yet ten days of his sentence to serve, so we were in time, if that meant anything. I decided. We were not in time. I knew instantly, as my friend hung up the receiver with the words:

"Not there—pardoned out."

Our next visit was to the mayor's office. Marvel knew all the ropes. There was no indecision or waste of time in his procedure. There was no reluctance on the part of the mayor's secretary in giving him access to all the records of the office.

I was close enough to the desk of the secretary to catch what was said. Edward Briggs had been sent to the house of correction on the day he appeared in court. On the one ensuing, he was pardoned out on the recommendation of Alderman Miles Ryner. Ah, here it was, observed the clerk—letter to the mayor from the councilman in question. Request that pardon be granted as the criminal charge of housebreaking had not been pressed; introduces Mr. Abel Vandamann, a valued constituent, who would vouch ward Briggs and practically accept parole conditions in behalf of the prisoner.

"That establishes something more than a mere incidental connection between these two men, I fancy," observed Marvel as we went outside again.

"And what of that—and what next?" I inquired.

"Well, what I locate our Fourteenth Man it will be a forward step, of course," observed Marvel. "We go back to the Ludington end of the chain now, however. Do you think you know the daughter of the house well enough to venture a call upon her?"

"For what purpose?" I inquired doubtfully.

"To induce her to come to my office."

I hesitated. I considered the effort to move Miss Grace Ludington from her stated position hopeless, and my friend knew instantly that so I thought. He went on, however, regardless of my opinion.

"You will inform Miss Ludington that it is vital that I should see her—two to four today. She had better come along. Tell her that it has nothing to do with the money of the bank, that it is not a question of cash, but of—family honor."

I could not for the life of me imagine under what dark curtain Resilius Marvel was gazing, but there was an indescribably lucid accuracy in the broad hint that he was about to strike a note with the young lady that would influence her more than promises or threats. He suggested explicitly, before I left him, the course I was to pursue in dealing with Miss Ludington. I went straightway to her home, lingered about its vicinity while framing the manner of my approach, and accepted the opportunity offered as she appeared with some letters in her hand to mail at the nearest letter box.

"I am not here in behalf of the bank, Miss Ludington," I stated calmly. "I come from a friend and a professional man who has been pursuing some investigation regarding the circumstances surrounding the death of your father. They are, he assured me, of sufficient importance to require your attention. You have heard of Resilius Marvel?"

"I have read about him," was the reply, shrinking and muted.

"If you knew Mr. Marvel as I knew him, you would trust to his earnest desire to be always helpful," I continued. "He seeks only to protect the family honor."

"Stop," cried Miss Ludington suddenly, sharply interrupting me, throwing aside her veil and presenting a colorless, defiant face. "What do you know—what does he know?"

"—I, nothing," I stammered, fairly abashed at the resolute challenge—"he, everything, probably. From two to four—you will see him?"

"I will see Mr. Marvel," she said slowly, and passed on her way.

"She was adamant to every attack I made to win an intimation, the faintest clue as to what she and her mother are holding back," Resilius Marvel narrated to me the next morning. "This girl is spanning ten years of her life with the agony, the resolve of one. She is under some terrific stress, and there is some influence that is holding these two women under a dreadful thrall."

"She would tell you nothing?" I asked.

"Until the last, absolutely nothing, except to beg that I would not disturb a condition that only she and her mother could remedy. She arose to leave. Suddenly she fixed her eyes upon me. I saw her studying me as if to search me through and through. I noted the flush of some compelling force in her face. 'Mr. Marvel,' she said, 'you claim a wish to be helpful to us, and I believe you, but this is a case where help from your viewpoint, instead of assisting us, might precipitate a direful catastrophe. But you are said to be a man who can find where others fail, who from the shadow can evolve a reality. You can do something for us, imperative, vital. If you can inform us what we cannot learn—the whereabouts of a certain person—you will bring us nearer to the light for the end.'"

Resilius Marvel handed me a worn photograph. It was that of a woman of dress, bold of face, wicked of eye. She had a certain wild beauty, but her smile was that of one who had been sacrificed for the sake of the card were these words: "Alas, as now—Idalia."

I wondered what was passing in the mind of my friend at this new element injected into the Ludington case. He did not see fit to enlighten me. He called for me at the bank the next day.

"A witness is sometimes handy," he observed, and as we went spinning along the boulevard south he briefly told of his success in locating this new woman in the case.

"The name of the photographer was a guiding clue," he advised me. "He did not know 'Idalia,' but he knew a friend of hers, an actress. From this friend I learned the whereabouts of the original of the picture. She is the inmate of the reformatory, on a sentence for robbery. We are going there."

A woman clad in light blue cotton uniform was called to us, after we had reached the place in question. She came into the room where we awaited her, her eyes roaming everywhere in an attempt to surmise the motive of our visit. Promptly Marvel drew the photograph Miss Ludington had supplied him from his pocket.

"I have come to ask you a question," he said. "How long have you known the man to whom you gave this photograph?"

In an instant the prison restraint, the forced reserve of discipline, all self control went to the winds. The woman first attempted to wrest the picture from the hand that held it, then she glared like a tiger, her face became distorted, she raved, she trembled from head to foot, she poured out curses upon the man a memory of whom the photograph had evoked.

"Listen," she cried. "Mark me, I swear it—the day I am freed from here, be it when it may—I will kill him."

"You are too late," observed Marvel quickly.

"I am too late?" she repeated, skeptically.

"Yes, he has been dead for weeks."

She laughed, this Idalia, this woman who made men shrink whom she did not cause to weep.

"You came to draw me out, to delude me," she scoffed. "From him! I see through you. Dead? Do you think I do not keep track of him through my friends on the outside, to be ready to know when and where, and how I shall strike when the hour comes? Go back and tell Abel Vandamann that from me."

A low whistle, so low that it would have been difficult to trace its source, proceeded from the lips of Resilius Marvel. He restored the photograph to his pocket. He made a motion to the attendant that his mission was accomplished. He said to me:

"The case is complete."

What he meant I groped vaguely in my mind to find out. He left me to think out one fact; that the photograph was the property of Abel Vandamann, not of dead Royal Ludington. Then how had it come into the possession of his daughter?

The great man proved his last statement to me the following evening. I was seated in the office of the United Bankers' Protective association when there came a commotion in its ante room. Then a man was thrust into the private office by two officers in uniform. Marvel followed, and the one policeman, retired at his words: "I will be responsible for this man. Now then, my friend, sit down and get your breath."

At a glance I knew the prisoner. It was Edward Briggs. He was frowzy, unkempt, savage looking, somewhat the worse for drink, and of lowering brow and pugnaclous lips.

"What's all this?" he growled out. "You have been arrested for dogging assault upon one certain Vandamann," observed Marvel.

"It would have been more certain if I had the show," retorted the fellow.

"Did you hurt him much?"

"Worse luck, no. The next time," the man glared across his knotted hat.

"On top of your last exploit," remarked Marvel, "it may be six months or a year this time. Unless you have left a case of mayhem behind you down at Vandamann's, I can promise you a chance to get out of this mix-up—on conditions."

"What conditions?" muttered the fellow, an evil eye fixed on both of us—suspicious and leery.

"As the Fourteenth Man—"

"What's that?" ejaculated Briggs with a start, and then he shrank back within himself, the barrier up, like a man in a trap.

"As the Fourteenth Man, you of course knew Royal Ludington."

"Suppose I did?"

"What did you take to his house the day of his funeral?"

Briggs bored into the questioner's face with his shrewd Terret eyes. He shook his head. "This is some kind of a frame-up," he declared. "I don't say a word till I know what's doing."

After some persuasion the man told. It amounted to this: Scoundrel-hearted Abel Vandamann had seen an opportunity in the sudden death of one of his victims to press fictitious claims. He had utilized the Fourteenth Man in his plot. This had been to have Briggs visit the Ludington home surreptitiously, place the photograph in a pocket of Ludington's coat, and in his desk a card bearing notations of various amounts. These corresponded in amounts to alleged notes of the deceased, were later presented to his widow for payment.

The wily schemer had convinced Mrs. Ludington that he held notes—were forgeries—to a large amount, given him by her husband. He had further persuaded her to believe that the borrowed money they represented had been squandered in gambling and in financing the extravagant whims of the woman, Idalia.

The notations, the photograph, all seemed to verify the foul misrepresentations that brought sorrow and death to the wife and daughter of the dead trader. Mrs. Ludington was a proud woman. The fear of disgrace, publicly, had made her the easy victim of the arch swindler, Abel Vandamann.

The demands of the broker were so extensive that his black-mailed victim found that after she had sacrificed her notes, there would be no hope of liquidating the indebtedness at the bank.

Resilius Marvel held a brief but productive interview with Abel Vandamann the next day. Then he carried to the bank twelve forged notes for $50,000, and a like amount in cash already extorted from Mrs. Ludington on similar forgeries. The bank therefore, lost nothing, and the Ludingtons were restored to fortune and lifted from the shadow of a great grief.

"There is such a thing as earthly retribution," observed Resilius Marvel to me one day.

A column in a daily newspaper was the basis of the remark. It told of the murder in cold blood of Abel Vandamann. A silletto had dealt him his death wound, so it might have been a woman. But his strong box was lifted—so it might have been a man. The police never found out, for the woman, Idalia, and the Fourteenth Man had disappeared as completely as though the earth had opened and swallowed them up.

FIRST AID FOR FAINTERS

Policemen of Washington Carry Tubes of Spirits of Ammonia to Revive Those Who Fall.

Every member of the Washington police force carries when on duty in crowds a pill box full of tiny glass tubes of aromatic spirits of ammonia, according to the Popular Science Monthly. These are for reviving persons who faint in the street.

The tubes are about an inch long and slightly more than an eighth of an inch in diameter. Each has a wrapping of absorbent cotton and over this a silk gauze covering.

Slight pressure between the fingers is sufficient to break the tube. The ammonia is promptly absorbed by the cotton about it, which also serves to prevent the sharp particles of glass from doing any harm. Held beneath the nose of the person who has fainted the fumes of the ammonia soon revive her. The tubes are stored in all the patrol boxes about the city and are carried in patrol wagons and police ambulances.

One of the beneficial effects of the recent scare over a threatened shortage of tin cans was an extended investigation into other possible methods of preserving food. The canned soup manufacturers were among the most earnest seekers, for they were threatened with having their tin supply cut off at an early date. They have worked out a process for putting up a dried soup in powdered form in containers of heavy wax paper. Similar systems of drying and packing vegetables are already in use in Europe, but the soup idea represents American enterprise. Apparently, it will not come on the market, because tin cans are going to be more plentiful than was anticipated.

Now Make Dried Soup.

One of the beneficial effects of the recent scare over a threatened shortage of tin cans was an extended investigation into other possible methods of preserving food. Getting By the Editor.

Getting by the editor is the most fascinating of indoor sports, says a writer in the Atlantic. When I was a journalist in the Prussian senate (that is, as an unfulfilled wish), my chum and I devised a way to get money for all our articles. Each agreed when he sent out a "story" to bet the other the price of the "story" that it wouldn't be accepted. That little arrangement took the sting out of a rejection completely; and when you lost your pay, you had the glory of the acceptance. Why said how the scheme broke down, I shall not divulge.

Preserving Worn Surfaces.

There are sometimes places on the exterior of a house where the paint gets worn off and which cannot be reached without climbing a "bitch job" of it, owing to the difficulty of missing the new paint to match the adjoining color which has faded. To preserve the wood in such spots until the house can be repainted, apply two coats of linseed oil with a rag. This will improve the appearance also. — Popular Science Monthly.

Keep Cheerful.

Be cheerful in the struggle to measure up your ideal. Fight your faults with sunshine. Self-improvement is the big business of life. It is true, but you will succeed all the better if you mix song and laughter with your efforts. If you are really trying to be good, you are bound to be successful, and that is a reason for going at it with bright faces and light hearts.— Exchange.

Game In Mexico.

Mexico cannot be said to offer a field for hunters of big game, and the term, "a sportsman's paradise," which is sometimes applied to it, is an exaggeration. Among animals may be enumerated the peccaries or javelines, deer, rabbits, hares. The reptiles include alligators, turtles and iguanas. Whales, seals and sea lions are encountered on the Pacific coast.— New York Times.

No Need of Explanation.

Mother had gone out for a few minutes, and when she returned a portion of the dinner was slightly burned. In dismay she said to her husband: "It is too bad it happened, but it will have to be served anyway. I'll explain to them and apologize." Jennie overheard and remarked snottily: "Don't feel bad about it, mother. You won't have to explain to them—they can taste it's burnt themselves."

Could Do His Part.

Frederick the Great heard of a Silesian clergyman who had a reputation of communicating with the spirits.

He sent for him and received him with the following question: "Can you call up ghosts?"

"At your pleasure, your majesty," replied the clergyman, "but they won't come."

WOMAN NOW IN PERFECT HEALTH

What Came From Reading a Finkham Advertisement.

Paterson, N. J.—"I thank you for the Lydia E. Finkham remedies as they have made me well and healthy. Some time ago I felt as if I was run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such a bad dream, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Finkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the above-said ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound. Blood Purifier, and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles as they did me."

"SHE WOULD NOT COME" WAS SPOKEN FINALLY. "SHE WILL NOT COME."

station in the residence portion of the city. I followed after my friend at his bidding as he went to the office of the captain.

Marvel halted at a door—it was the day of the funeral of Royal Ludington. He gave a name. It was Edward Briggs, the man arrested at the Ludington home that same night. The official consulted the record book. He read its details ending with the sixty days' sentence of the prisoner.

"Photographed?" inquired my friend.

"So noted—No. 8796."

"That is all—thanks," nodded Marvel, and within ten minutes we were at the identification bureau.

The Fourteenth Man—Edward Briggs, he observed, as No. 8796 was produced, and he held it beside the flashlight photograph of the Vandamann function. There was no doubt as to the conclusion he had arrived at. The faces were identical. I was wondering what all this was going to lead to while the bureau official was explaining that although only a misdemeanor had been charged against the prisoner, it had been thought best to take his picture for possible past and future reference.

Marvel went over to a phone and called up the house of correction. I had done some brief calculating in my mind. Edward Briggs had yet ten days of his sentence to serve, so we were in time, if that meant anything. I decided. We were not in time. I knew instantly, as my friend hung up the receiver with the words:

"Not there—pardoned out."

Our next visit was to the mayor's office. Marvel knew all the ropes. There was no indecision or waste of time in his procedure. There was no reluctance on the part of the mayor's secretary in giving him access to all the records of the office.

I was close enough to the desk of the secretary to catch what was said. Edward Briggs had been sent to the house of correction on the day he appeared in court. On the one ensuing, he was pardoned out on the recommendation of Alderman Miles Ryner. Ah, here it was, observed the clerk—letter to the mayor from the councilman in question. Request that pardon be granted as the criminal charge of housebreaking had not been pressed; introduces Mr. Abel Vandamann, a valued constituent, who would vouch ward Briggs and practically accept parole conditions in behalf of the prisoner.

"That establishes something more than a mere incidental connection between these two men, I fancy," observed Marvel as we went outside again.

"And what of that—and what next?" I inquired.

"Well, what I locate our Fourteenth Man it will be a forward step, of course," observed Marvel. "We go back to the Ludington end of the chain now, however. Do you think you know the daughter of the house well enough to venture a call upon her?"

"For what purpose?" I inquired doubtfully.

"To induce her to come to my office."

I hesitated. I considered the effort to move Miss Grace Ludington from her stated position hopeless, and my friend knew instantly that so I thought. He went on, however, regardless of my opinion.

"You will inform Miss Ludington that it is vital that I should see her—two to four today. She had better come along. Tell her that it has nothing to do with the money of the bank, that it is not a question of cash, but of—family honor."

I could not for the life of me imagine under what dark curtain Resilius Marvel was gazing, but there was an indescribably lucid accuracy in the broad hint

GAINED 12 POUNDS ON TWO BOTTLES

Packard Employee Couldn't Find Anything That Would Relieve Him.

FEELS LIKE NEW MAN

"I Have Been Entirely Relieved of My Troubles—Wouldn't Be Without Tanlac for Anything."

"I have gained twelve pounds on my first two bottles of Tanlac and I feel that it has made a new man of me," was the remarkable statement made the other day by J. J. Smith, a valued employee of the Packard Motor Company, who lives at 134 Thirty-first street, Detroit.

"My stomach has been in such a terrible condition," he continued, "that for the past seven months it has almost run me distracted. I had no appetite at all and everything I would eat disagreed with me and formed gas that made me miserable night and day. My head ached awfully most all the time and I could hardly sleep an hour at a time for pain and worrying about my condition. My head was all stopped up with catarrh and I was 'hawking' and spitting all the time, trying to get rid of the mucus—dropping into my throat. I felt that I was getting worse every day and I was simply running and worried and not fit for a thing. I was constantly taking something or other trying to get relief, but nothing bit the mark until I got hold of Tanlac."

I read of a case similar to mine that had been relieved by Tanlac so I got a bottle and never in all my life have I seen anything like the way it took hold of my troubles. Why, I began to feel better before I had taken half the first bottle and now I can eat anything I want and it all agrees with me. I don't have any trouble with gas and all those headaches are gone. I sleep like a healthy child and I seem to be able to work better without getting tired like I did before. In fact, I have been entirely relieved of all my troubles and I wouldn't be without Tanlac for anything and be like I was a few months ago."

They were in the equid under training at a certain military center and furnished a contrast not uncommon these days. One was tall and wiry, the other short and puffy, and an hour of Swedish drill had set the lesser of the two blowing hard.

"I can't stand much of this," he whispered, "I'm simply all in," and at that moment the drill sergeant interrupted that he would give them another spell before they were dismissed. This was too much. The puffy patriot felt it was time to protest.

"I'm really awfully sorry to seem unamiable in addressing you, sir," he said, "but this Swedish drill is more than I can face in my present condition, besides," he added dolefully, "I never knew we were at war with Sweden."

No Vacation Trips in Germany.

The Prussian ministry of communications issued an urgent appeal to the public not to travel. The people are begged not to leave their homes unless for the most compelling reasons of health or recreation. There will be no holiday trains nor excursion routes this summer, though excursions will be run in case of special emergency. The public is reminded that, while food in the country is plentiful here and there, the only "certain" way of getting anything to eat is to stay at home.

HER WORK NOT APPRECIATED

Cook Thought Efforts Wasted Because Master Was Not Laid Up Periodically From Overeating.

A lady had a cook who gave her every satisfaction, and she was under the impression that the cook was equally satisfied with her place. But one morning, to the lady's intense surprise, the cook told her she was going away.

"Whatever do you want to leave for," June asked her mistress, "I am very pleased with you, and I thought you were quite comfortable here."

"Yes, mum, I'm comfortable enough in the kitchen, but—"

The cook hesitated and flidgeted about.

"But what?" queried her mistress. "Well, mum," she blurted out, "the fact is, master doesn't seem to appreciate my cooking, and I can't stop in a place where my efforts to please are wasted; so I'd rather go, mum."

"But what makes you think that your master doesn't appreciate your cooking?" His he ever complained to you?" asked the lady.

"No, mum; but my last master was always being laid up through overeating—he said he couldn't help doing so, because his cooking was so delicious; but master here hasn't been laid up once all the three months I've been with you, and that's just what bothers me so, mum."

The cook hesitated and flidgeted about.

SCANDINAVIAN NEWS

SUMMARY OF IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN FAR OFF NORTHLAND.

ITEMS FROM THE OLD HOME

Resume of the Most Important Events in Sweden, Norway and Denmark—Of Interest to the Scandinavians in America.

Scandinavian countries are expected to hold a conference soon at which the main point of discussion will be the effect of America's entrance into the war. Information to this effect has reached Washington through official channels.

Almost one thousand Scandinavian ships have been destroyed by mines or torpedoes since the beginning of the war, the number up to date being about 600 for Norway, 187 for Denmark, and 140 for Sweden. The whole number of summer losses is about 600.

DENMARK.

The result of the special stock census of February 24, 1917, has been published. It shows that there were 588,000 horses, including the colts, as against 515,000 at the same time in 1916. This made an increase of 23,000, or 4.5 per cent. There were 2,453,000 head of cattle (2,260,000 in 1916), or only about 40,000 less than at the beginning of the war. Number of pigs, 1,081,000 (1,080,000 last year), a decrease of about one-tenth of 1 per cent. The decrease since the beginning of the war has been over 20 per cent. Sheep and lambs, 270,000, an increase of 18,000, or 6 per cent. The exports of meat and dairy products have been enormous ever since the beginning of the war, and it was a great surprise to the world in general to find that only in the case of hogs has the number of animals been materially reduced. The cost and the difficulty of obtaining American corn explains the slump in the number of hogs.

Large parts of the country are threatened with a future of the crops. Only in Jutland was there a normal rainfall in June. Copenhagen and vicinity have had only two rainy days for several months. The gardeners cannot obtain oil for running their fertilizing plants, and large fields and gardens are drying up. Only one-fourth of the normal quantity of vegetables has been shipped into the city. Strawberries, for instance, are twice as expensive as last year. Rain must come soon, or the fruit crop will be lost.

Danish farmers living close to the German boundary live in plain bitterness of the difficulties put in their way whenever they need to cross the line. In the first place a pass costs $13.50. In the second place, all kinds of trouble is trumped up when the pass is used. On the other hand, Germans who cross the line seem to find it easy to pass into Denmark.

The city of Copenhagen had to take care of 250 families who had fled to quarters to live in. Most of them were assigned rooms in public school houses.

SWEDEN.

A fapp convention in Trollhättan, Sweden, last winter, gave a fresh impetus to the Scandinavian Lapp movement. Next winter a general Lapp convention for Sweden and Norway is to meet at Östersund, Sweden, for the purpose of discussing laws regarding the nomadic Lapps. The Swedish government will contribute $800 to the general expenses of this convention, which proves that it is looked upon with favor by the authorities of the country.

The pro-German portion of the Stockholm press republished with evident satisfaction a telegraphic dispatch to the Berliner Tageblatt reporting anti-conscription riots in the United States. The police, the dispatch said, were compelled to restore order in Cleveland and Chicago. Resistance to conscription is declared also to be especially vigorous in Montreal.

In Breared parish, Holland, an interesting as well as useful find was made in a bog at a depth of about one yard. It was an oak tree which must have been dead for a good many thousand years. It was so sound, however, that it was saved up and used for the making of furniture. Enough lumber was saved to make three ordinary car trunks.

The fishermen of Blockbo are facing starvation on account of the scarcity of all for their fishing motors. When a motor goes far out to sea for herring a trip requires from seven to eight gallons of gasoline, and now they can hardly obtain more than half as much as they need to keep up their business.

The Marieland and Tromp estates, Holland, which consist of about 1,400 acres of fine agricultural land, are to be divided up into a number of small farms.

An interesting "slab-stone" inscription has been discovered at Biskopskilla. There are pictures of 21 human beings arranged in a straight row running east and west. The inscription must have been made before the introduction of rune letters in Scandinavia.

V. Quarfordt of Karlskrona, emphasized the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of his wedding and his removal from the city by donating $27,000 to the city for charitable purposes.

Representatives of Spain, Switzerland, Holland, Denmark and Norway are going to meet Swedish representatives in Stockholm for a conference on war and peace at Sweden's invitation. Some acceptance already have been received. The invitation for the parley was issued at the instance of King Gustaf, and the picked representatives will meet here with the ministers of the six remaining neutral countries of Europe. Such a conference was planned once before, but it fell through. Now the parley seems certain. The scope of the contemplated conference will be far greater than a discussion of food and shipping difficulties. The delegates will endeavor to formulate measures by which the six countries expect to gain a voice in the peace conference between the belligerents whenever it shall come. Representatives of the six neutral governments also will discuss measures which prevent their countries being, by any pretext or maneuver, dragged into the war. A proposal of this sort, however, was declined in Sweden's invitation. In short, the six governments propose to organize nothing less than a peace league for mutual protection. It is an "old" of the war" measure. So far the cablegram in this connection it should be mentioned that the governments of the allies have refused to grant passports to the delegates who were to attend the socialist peace conference in Stockholm. By this policy the allies have clearly indicated that they are not in sympathy with the peace movement staged from time to time in Scandinavia, and if such a conference as the one outlined in the above cablegram is attempted it will no doubt be far from pleasing to the governments of the allies.

NORWAY.

Dr. Christian L. Lange, general secretary of the interparliamentary union who is a Norwegian and has his headquarters at Kristiania, has just made the third round of the different European groups that he has undertaken since the beginning of year, and after conferences at Petrograd, Berlin, Vienna and Bern, has conferred with the Netherlands group of the interparliamentary union at The Hague. "You may imagine the difficulties connected with the maintenance of the union and its work in these times," he remarked. "When I mention that the executive committee is composed of an Englishman, a Belgian, a Dutchman, an Austrian and a German. The close participation of members of the various groups in the political life of their respective countries puts an obstacle in any plan of gathering or direct operation out of the question, albeit the three Scandinavian groups continue to meet periodically. Our main concern for the present is the maintenance of the union intact, so that when peace comes we may be ready to at once reestablish contact and cooperate in the reconstruction of international life and the development of international organization." The position of his own country, Norway, Doctor Lange described as exceedingly difficult. "Despite its noncombatant position," he said, "food has risen 68 per cent in price, which exactly corresponds with the increase in the cost of living in Germany. The reason for this is that we are so largely dependent on foreign supplies; a third of Norway's food has to be imported. Not shipping losses have been exceedingly heavy and her fleet shows a great shrinkage as compared with its dimensions at the outbreak of the war. Shipowners' losses are enormous. Immensely, but so far as the country and its economic concerns are concerned, the money cannot make up for the sinking ships and the lost trade which they represent. Whereas, before the war, wealth was pretty evenly distributed there, the war has created a new moneyed class, but over against this comparatively small group of rich people there is a great mass of the nation weighed down by the burdens the war has imposed. Norway has come off better than most if not all other European neutrals in the matter of mobilization expenses, for her geographical position secures to her much greater safety. Nevertheless, these expenses are exceedingly heavy. The chances of Norway getting into complications with either of the belligerent parties at present appear very slight," added Doctor Lange. "The clouds of last year's acute crisis have passed over."

A representative of the Belgians has been raising money in Norway for his unfortunate countrymen, and he received more aid than he had expected from such a "poor" country.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Grand Rapids—Dr. Charles A. Row, dentist at White Cloud, has filed suit for $50,000 damages against the Pere Marquette railroad, claiming personal injury in an accident at Englishville last December.

Potosky—Mrs. E. H. Bingham and son Murray, of Detroit, were seriously injured in an auto wreck near Charlevoix. The mother has serious internal injuries. Their auto struck a road repair outfit.

Flint—Guy Green, factory employee, who took a job on the farm to help out a temporary shortage of farm help, lost two fingers when he was cleaning the knives of a moving machine and the horses started.

Traverse City—A complete soaking, inside and out, failed to drown Paddy Larkin. Intoxicated, he pumped in the Boardman river, then hid for fear of arrest, and, when 100 men, drag the river for his body.

Marshall—Frank Muhl reports the largest yield of wheat raised in southern Michigan in years. He got 418 bushels from nine acres and sold it in Tekonsha for $2.02 a bushel. It was of the Marquis variety.

Traverse City—What is to be the biggest gathering of Odd Fellows that ever took place in this part of the state, will be the first annual picnic and outing of an organization of the orders in Grand Traverse, Leelanau, Antrim, Benzie, Kalkaska, Charlevoix and Westford counties Labor day at Elk Rapids. On the program will be speeches by Grand lodge and encampment officers.

Bay City—William H. Stickle, 69 years old, is dead as a result of injuries he received when he was run down by an automobile driven by Alfred Anderson, of Kalkaska. Stickle, who was on a bicycle, became confused and ran in the path of the machine. He was a retired farmer and formerly a prominent horseman. He was also a deputy sheriff. Anderson was exonerated from blame.

Port Huron—The Michigan Beam company has announced it will start construction of a huge warehouse and office building here at once.

Traverse City—Only men accepted for national army service will comprise a ball team here to play a similar outfit from Mancelona Labor day.

Jackson—William Fehnestock, from Allegan county, on a sentence of five years for bigamy, met instant death at the prison when he fell from a scaffolding 35 feet high.

Sandusky—Threshers have raised rates three cents for handling oats and barley, four cents for wheat and rye, five cents for peas and buckwheat and eight cents for beans.

Port Huron—Miss Grace Bozo, 14 years old, is the first woman truck driver here. She is driving for the Morton Salt Co. The heaviest package she will have to handle weighs 150 pounds.

Bay City—Alexander Bukowski, 25 years old, whose automobile turned over when he was returning to his home in Merritt township after being accepted for the new army, died from injuries without recovering consciousness.

Bay City—Oliver Bukowski, 28 years old, was fatally injured when his auto going at a high rate of speed struck a rut and turned over twice in the ditch on Tascosa road, five miles south of here. He was caught beneath the wreck and was unconscious when farmers dug him out. Bukowski had been called for the army and was returning home after having his exemption claim denied by the board. He is a son of Jacob Bukowski, well known Merritt township farmer.

Bay City—All unmuzzled dogs at large here and in Essexville will be shot.

Traverse City—Fifty insane patients have been transferred to the state hospital here from Kalamazoo where the hospital is overcrowded.

Saginaw—A movement has been launched here to give a big demonstration and farewell to the 671 young men who will form this county's first quota for the draft army.

St. Louis—Real estate men have purchased old houses and barns on farms near here and have been moving them into the city with traction engines to relieve the housing situation here.

Alma—Dale, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wiley, from miles west of here, was instantly killed in a runaway accident. He was thrown beneath the wagon wheels and his skull was crushed.

Battle Creek—Four serious automobile accidents within 48 hours caused Mayor C. E. Wilson to appoint 2 new officers to patrol speeders. Drivers of quartermasters' cars for Camp Custer were notified they would not be exempted.

Lexington—Mrs. Martha Henry has received word from her daughter, Miss Ethel Henry, a member of the Huron hospital unit, telling of its arrival in France.

Richmond—The body of William Watts, 65 years old, who shot his stock, set fire to his home and then killed himself, was found in the ruins of the building.

Ann Arbor—Edwin Heusel, bakery employee is suffering from severe burns on his face and neck, the result of an explosion of an automatic gas stove he attempted to light.

Flint—Leon A. Sheelton, a vaudeville contortionist, startled the army examiners in the second district when he appeared in answer to a call by twisting his limbs into knots. He was rejected on account of poor vision.

Cadillac—Three sons from one family in the ### $100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh medicine is taken internally, and acts upon the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh medicine that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

STATE GAME, FISH AND FOREST FIRE DEPARTMENT OF THE PUBLIC DOMAIN COMMISSION.

Order Fixing the Time and Place For Public Hearing.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, ss.
County of Ingham.

A petition having been filed with this department, signed by a majority of the members of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Crawford, Michigan, asking that a time and place be fixed for a public hearing to determine the advisability of suspending, abridging or otherwise regulating the open season now fixed by law on the following animals and birds, to wit: deer and partridge because of the threatened depletion or extermination of such animals and birds, on account of cold, wet breeding seasons and forest fires in said County.

Therefore, I, John Baird, State Game, Fish and Forest Fire Commissioner of the Public Domain Commission of Michigan, do hereby designate and fix the said time and place for the said public hearing as follows, to-wit: The said hearing will be held in the village of Grayling on the 25th day of September, 1917 at nine o'clock in the forenoon, at the Court house, which hearing may be continued or adjourned for such time as may be deemed advisable by the said Commissioner to afford all persons interested an opportunity to be heard in regard to the petition to suspend, abridge or regulate the open season on said game animals and birds.

Given under my hand and seal this twenty-fourth day of August 1917.

John Baird
Commissioner of the Public Domain Commission.
